

PRIVATE BRIEFING

— E-COMMERCE STOREFRONT PROGRAM

Own an Amazon storefront. Operated for you by a team that runs 500+.

Exelion Group connects investors with the right e-commerce channel and the right operator. For Amazon and Walmart storefronts, our preferred vendor is Stable Storefronts — a New Jersey operator with its own warehouse, its own inventory, and 534 partner-owned stores.

— EXELION + STABLE STOREFRONTS

We find the channel. Stable runs the store.

E-commerce channels vary wildly — Amazon, Walmart, TikTok Shop, Shopify, eBay — and each one takes a different expertise. Exelion's job is to match investors who want into e-commerce with the channel that fits and the operator who has already proven it at scale.

Exelion Group

Your point of contact. We qualify fit, explain the options, and introduce you to the operator. We work with several partners so the advice is channel-first, not vendor-first.

Stable Storefronts — preferred vendor

Exelion's preferred vendor for Amazon, Walmart, and Rarely storefronts. Stable builds, stocks, and operates the store you own. Stable does not do eBay, TikTok Shop, or Shopify — if that's your channel, we'll point you elsewhere.

You — the owner

You own the storefronts and the accounts. You fund the package and the inventory. Stable does the work; you review the numbers.

— MEET STABLE STOREFRONTS

Operators with a warehouse, not marketers with a course.

Stable Storefronts is a New Jersey e-commerce operator. They hold their own inventory, run their own fulfillment, and operate storefronts on behalf of hundreds of partner-owners. You can visit the warehouse and meet the team.

— THE TWO-STORE PACKAGE

Amazon + Rarely. One package, two storefronts. $40,000

one-time · you own both stores

Two revenue channels, one operator. An Amazon storefront for reach, plus a store on Rarely, Stable's own platform, where Stable controls the supply and the marketplace directly.

- You own the storefronts and the seller accounts. Stable operates them for you.
- Stable builds, stocks, and runs everything — sourcing, listings, fulfillment, account health.
- Inventory is separate and is the growth lever (next page).
- Hands-off for you. Stable's team does the work; you review the numbers.

Why two stores instead of one

Amazon is the largest marketplace in the world, and it comes with Amazon's rules. Account reviews and policy actions happen to good sellers. On its own, a single Amazon store is a single point of failure.

Rarely is the platform Stable owns and controls. It runs on Stable's inventory, so it isn't exposed to a third party's policy decisions. Pairing the two gives you diversification inside one package.

This is the package Stable recommends and the one we present.

Stable also operates Walmart storefronts — ask on your call.

— PACKAGE + INVENTORY

The package builds the store. Inventory is the catalyst.

The $40,000 covers the build and operation of both storefronts. Inventory is funded separately and is what actually generates sales — the more product cycling through your stores, the faster the return.

$40K

Package

Amazon + Rarely storefronts, built and operated by Stable. One-time. Walmart available on request.

~90 days

Inventory cycle

Inventory turns roughly every 90 days, including Amazon fulfillment-center transfer time. Each turn is a chance to compound — a rental turns your money once a year; an inventory business turns it many times.

You decide

Inventory sizing

Sized to your goals on the call. Partners who commit more to inventory reach payback faster; partners who keep inventory minimal should expect a longer runway.

PLAIN LANGUAGE

Think of the $40,000 as the factory and inventory as the raw material. The factory doesn't produce without material. Your inventory budget is the single biggest variable in how quickly the stores pay you back — and it stays your capital, in product you own.

Inventory requirements and recommended starting levels are reviewed individually with Stable. Figures are illustrative, not guarantees.

— WHAT TO EXPECT — HONESTLY

A real business, on a real timeline.

Nobody here promises you a number. What we can tell you is how a store typically develops, based on how Stable's partner stores have behaved. Give it a quarter to build. Judge it over a year.

MONTHS 1–3

Build-out

Entity, accounts, listings, first inventory. Expect little to no return in this window — the store is being built.

MONTH 4+

Ramp

Stores are live and inventory is cycling. Sales climb toward run-rate; don't expect the full run-rate in month four either.

OPERATIONAL

10% true-up rebate

On Amazon, you make at least 10% on every item sold in your store, every month. If a month falls short, Stable discounts your next inventory order by the shortfall.

YEAR ONE

20–25% target

A conservative first-year target on the $40,000 package. Partners who put more into inventory have done materially better; minimal inventory means a longer runway.

HOW THE TRUE-UP WORKS (AMAZON STORE)

Say your store sells $10,000 of inventory in a month and returns $10,700 — a 7% margin. Stable credits the $300 shortfall as a straight discount on your next inventory order, truing you up to 10% profit for that month. The floor is on the profit you make on inventory sold; inventory sizing still drives the total dollars.

True-up rebate applies to the Amazon storefront and is credited against your next inventory purchase; full terms are in your Stable agreement. First-year target is not a guarantee. E-commerce carries risk, including loss of capital. Informational only; not an offer of securities.

— WHO THIS IS FOR

Built for owners, not operators.

This is a managed asset for people who want to own an e-commerce business without running one. It is a good fit if:

- You have $40,000 in liquid capital for the package, plus an inventory budget — no financing.
- You can make a decision within 30 days. If the timing is off, we'll follow up when it's right.
- You want a hands-off asset run by a team with a physical operation you can visit.
- You think in years, not weeks — and you'd rather hear a conservative number than a flashy one.

Probably not a fit if...

- You need the capital back inside 90 days.
- You want to run the day-to-day yourself.
- You're looking for eBay, TikTok Shop, or Shopify — Stable doesn't operate those channels.
- You're looking for a guarantee. There isn't one, and we won't pretend otherwise.

— WHAT HAPPENS NEXT

Two conversations. No pressure on either.

You're going to talk to the operator and to a partner who already owns stores — not to a salesperson. Take the time you need between the two.

Strategy call — with Stable's CEO

A 30-minute conversation directly with Daniel Hunt, CEO of Stable Storefronts. He walks the 30,000-foot view of how the stores work, answers your questions, and you both decide whether it's worth a second conversation.

Validation call — with a current partner

Meet a Stable partner who has owned stores through the program and made money in it. Ask him anything. This is where you hear how it actually went, from someone who did it.

Onboard

Agreement, entity and accounts, inventory plan, build begins. From here, Stable's team runs the operation and you review the numbers.

BEFORE YOUR CALL

Come with your questions and a rough sense of your inventory budget. There's nothing to prepare beyond that — the point of the first call is to see if this fits, and it's fine if the answer is no.

— THE QUESTIONS EVERYONE ASKS

We'd rather you ask now than wonder later.

Do I actually own the stores?

Yes. The storefronts, the seller accounts, and the inventory are yours. Stable operates them on your behalf.

What does the $40,000 cover, and what doesn't it?

It covers building and operating both storefronts. Inventory is separate and is your capital — in product you own. Any ongoing fees are walked through line by line on your call before you sign anything.

Who is Exelion, and who is Stable?

Exelion Group is your introduction and point of contact; we work with several e-commerce partners. Stable Storefronts is our preferred vendor for Amazon, Walmart, and Rarely — the operator that actually runs your stores.

What returns should I expect?

Plan on a 90-day build. Once operational, Stable's 10% true-up means you make at least 10% on inventory sold through your Amazon store each month, with any shortfall credited to your next order. Conservative first-year target on the package: 20–25%. Inventory drives the total.

How much of my time does this take?

Very little. Stable's team handles sourcing, listings, fulfillment, and account health; you review the numbers and stay informed on your stores.

What if Amazon suspends the account?

It happens to legitimate sellers, which is exactly why the package includes a Rarely store on Stable's own platform. Stable's team handles Amazon account health and compliance day to day.

Can I talk to someone who's done this?

Yes — it's built into the process. Your second conversation is with a current Stable partner who owns stores in the program.

What exactly am I signing?

An agreement with Stable Storefronts for the build and operation of storefronts you own. Stable walks the full agreement and structure with you on your call, and you're encouraged to have your attorney review it. This material is informational only.

NEXT STEP

— LET'S SEE IF IT FITS

Thirty minutes with the operator. Then you decide.

Your strategy call is directly with Stable's CEO. You'll hear how the stores work, what they cost, what to realistically expect, and what could go wrong. If it fits, you'll meet a current partner next. If it doesn't, we'll tell you.
